THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION IN JUNE

Charleston, May 3.—Mr. Barry continued, saying that the platform may be opened at Baltimore, and may be changed to meet our views. I think we are delegates to that Convention, and that we ought to go to ballot. If our constituents choose to fill our places with other delegates, they can do so; we are as yet, however, still members of that Convention, and no one except our constituents can take our credentials from us, therefore, he hoped the course he urged would be adopted.

A resolution providing that an address on the grounds on which the Southern States second from the Convention, be prepared and published together with the proceeding of this Convention, was adopted, when the Con-vention adjourned sine die.

Important Mormon News Young Joe Smith to Become Chief Prophet and High Priest-Brigham Young to be Deposed.

A writer in a New Orleans paper mentions This is an extract from a private letter written a few days since to a phylcian of St. Louis, from Nauvoo, Illinois:

Young Joseph Smith and his mother, son and wife of Prophet Joseph of Mormon notoriety, lately attended a Conference of Mormons, held in the State of Illinois, at which time Joseph and his mother were both haptised in the faith, and young Joe was ordained head high priest and prophet by them. Joe pretends he was led by the spirit of God to do so, but I am of the opinion that the spirit of speculation had more to do with it than God had, as the family are very much in debt, their property being all mortgaged, and Joe is to receive the sum of $20,000 per year for his use. from Nauvoo, Illinois:

> The Atlantic Cable The Cause of Its Fallure A New One Proposed.
> A recent lecturer in New York stated that the principal cause of the failure of the Atlantic Cable was the fact that gutta-purchas poor non-conductor—had been used in its construction. Again, copper-wire was much weaker than fron-wire, and would first give way. The twist of the cable had a tendency to kink in the second construction. Again, copper-wire was much weaker than fron-wire, and would first give way. The twist of the cable had a tendency to kink in the soft mud of the ocean-bottom. The lecturer, in the cable of his invention, would use no gutta-percha, copper-wire or fron-wire in a twisted form. His conductor would consist of a single copper-wire, insulated by a coating of shellac and cotton cloth; and, as it passed from the ship's stern, it would receive a conting of tar, by a simple adaptation of the machinery. By his proposed system of coiling about a cone, the twist into "kinks" would be avoided. The cable would support four miles of its own length, and when payed out would be partially sustained by floats of pine plank, so that it would sink gradually and undergo little strain. Its cost would be much less than that of any heretofore manufactured; its weight on land would be one tun per milein water, only two hundred pounds. The capital required to lay such a cable would be not greater than half a million of dollars. Severe tests had been applied to his invention, which it had successfully undergone, such as severe hydrostatic pressure, under which the electric current had passed with perfect facility.

Characteristic Anecdote of Peter Cart

Numerous anecdotes are related of Dr Numerous anecdotes are related of Dr. Cartwright. Among the many we will relate one which is strikingly characteristic of the man: In the days of President Jackson he was spending a Sabbath in Louisville, Ky., and was invited by a young pastor to preach in his church in the evening. He accepted the invitation and appeared in the pulpit. While going through with the introductory exercises, General Jackson came into the church and took his seat. The young preacher, whose notions of respectability were somewhat fastidious, began to exhibit considerable uncashees for fear the rough and eccentric Cartwright might offend the President. At length he whispered to the uncouth old stranger, "Gens. Jackson is in the congregation," but the individual addressed paid no attention to the hint. Again the sentance "Gen. Jackson is in the congregation," fell upon his ear with greater distinctness sentance "Gen, Jackson is in the congregation," fell upon his ear with greater distinctness than before. The patience of the "backwoods preacher" was exhausted, and turning to his whispering tormentor, exclaimed in a tone that the entire congregation heard, What do I care for Gen. Jackson? God will damn him as quick as he will any nigger in Kentucky, if he decan't repeat!"

The mortified young man afterward tried to apologize to Gen Jackson for the roughness of Mr. Cartwright, Jackson replied: "You need not apologize for that man; if I had a regiment of such men I could conquer old

GREAT OUTRAGE UPON A WOMAN .- A pectable widow, thirty-six years of age, was freadfully outraged last Sunday in Albany, dreadfully outraged last Sunday in Albany, New York, by a party of rowdies, ten or twelve in number. Going from Buffalo to visit friends in Newark, N. J., she could not find them and was compelled to return. Ar-riving in New York, she went on board the Isaac Newton and gave to an officious stran-ger her last fifty cents, he proposing to pur-chase her ticket for her. Of course, she never saw the man or the money again, and wher she landed in Albany she was forced to leave, her umbrella to pay her passage. Then she went to the Little Basin, endeavoring to enwent to the Little Basin, endeavoring to en-gage a situation as cook on board a boat, thus hoping to earn her passage home. By false pretenses she was inveigled into the brutal party above alluded to, and from them she suffered her last and greatest misfortune. Calhoun, Webster and Clay. Mr. Calhoun's statue, ordered for Charleston, was lost in a shipwreck off Fire Island, but finally recovered with an arm broken, which was subsequently replaced by Mr. Powers, the sculptor. The bronze statue of Mr. Webster was lost at sea, and never recovered but a second was cast from the second covered; but a second was cast from the san model, and is now in the State-house yard a Boston. The first model for the statue of Mr Clay was also lost at sea. The coincidence is ertainly remarkable

Serious Military Plot in England. Recently a serious military disturbance took place in the Trafaigar-road, Greenwich. It appears that a numerous party of soldiers belonging to the Royal Artillery, Royal Marines, Military Train Corps, and City of Dublin Milita, several of whom were intoxicated, grossly insulted various persons in the streets. A riot ultimately took place, and an artillery any way continued by rolling conartilleryman was captured by police con-stables. The soldiers, who numbered about one hundred men, then raised a cry to rescue one hundred men, then raised a cry to rescue the prisoner, and violently attacked the constables, who took refuge at the house of Mr.

armed with staves from a garden fence,
which was pulled down for the occasion.
Being unable to rescue the prisoner, who was

The utmost alarm prevailed in the locality; and as soon as possible the tradesmen's shops were closed, and a messenger was sent to the Park-row Station-house for assistance. Mr. Inspector Golding, with the whole of the reserve men on duty, promptly arrived, and matters then assumed a serious aspect. The soldiers, each armed with some weapon, had taken up a military position completely across the road, and used the most violent threats to the police, who then mustered about the road, and used the most violent threats to the police, who then mustered about twenty men, and who were aided by Sergeant Mann, of the City of Dublin Artillery Militia, two non-commissioned officers of the Royal Artillery, and a large number of residents, who were warned to aid and assist. The two parties faced each other for about five minutes, when in obedience to orders the police advanced upon the soldiers with their truncheons out at a run, and the latter, unable or unwilling to stand the sudden charge, took to their heels, and were pursued by the police for some distance on the road to Woolwich. A strong body of police were afterward on duty at the scene of the disturbance.

A Taurine Gymnast - Extraordinary Freaks of a Bull.

A young bull, in Sadsbury, Penn., recently astonished the denizens of that locality, by some extraordinary feats. With other cattle, the bull was ranging in the farm yard; thence he ascended a short flight of stone steps rising from the yard to a bank. From this he got on to the roof of a shed which rested against the end of a bayn. The eves of this shed were about three feet from the ground. He ascended this until he reached the square of the barn. When he reached ground. He ascended this until he reached the square of the barn. When he reached the highest point of the shed roof, with the agility of a cat, he leaped undaunted from that to the roof of the main building, which was much steeper—having what the carpenters term a three-eighth pitch. He continued his perilous ascent until he reached the comb or peak of the roof. Here the animal halfad, recently a continuation of the reached the comb or peak of the roof. comb or peak of the roof. Here the animal halted—presenting a curious spectacle—a bull on the very comb or roof of the barn! In this situation he was observed by a number of spectators, who were equally lost in wonder at the means by which the animal ascended to his lefty position, and as to how he should descend to terra firms without breaking his neck. Even the cattle in the yard seemed uneasy at the novel position of Master Bull, and at his foolish ambition to show himbelf. All hands were, however, soon relieved of their anxiety. The bull, after taking a survey of the surrounding country, and having apparently satisfied his curjosity, gave a flourish of his tall, and descended by the roud he ascended, and reached the ground in safety.

VEARFUL SIGNIFICATION OF TIP-TOP LIFE. A young man who is serving out a term in the Michigan State Prison, has written a long letter to his friends, dwelling upon the causes which led him into crime, and summing up the conditions of "tip-top life," as understood by rapid young gentlemen. He says: "You may not comprehend this term, but let me explain. By living a tip-top life, is meant first to be idle: ascend to drink whishe or may not comprehend this term, but let me explain. By living a tip-top life, is meant first to be idle; second, to drink whisky, or any thing else, (and of course get drunk); third, to frequent all places, of course fun, such as cock-fights, boxing matches, negro shows, &c.; fourth, to keep a concubine or two; and fifth, to steal all they can lay their hands upon. This then, is living a tip-top life. Thus have I fallen, and thus will thousands of young men fall.

A WOMAN SHOOTS AT A BURGLAR AND A Woman Shoots at a Burghar and Nearly Kills free Hussand.—A short time ago, a married lady of South Memphis, Tenn., returning home from a party late at night observed a burghar in her bed-room, and procuring a revolver from the drawer of a bureau, fired at him. The ball missed the rogue, but passed in close proximity to the head of her husband, who was lying asleep on the bed, under the influence of chloroform administersd to him by the thief. terad to him by the thief.

LACK OF JUDICIAL GALLANTRY.—Two single ladies in Pittsburg, the other day, attempted to betriend a young lad who had been pierced by the fangs of the law, but an angaliant Judge positively refused to accept their proffered bail, although they were proved to be worth $25,000 each, on the ground that they were females. This item is respectfully commended to the attention of the next Woman's Rights Convention.

BRITISH AGENTS THE CAUSE OF THE SICILIAN BRITISH AGINTS THE CAUSE OF THE SIGILIAN OUTBERAK.—A Paris correspondent writes that the Psirie, in speaking of the outbreak in Sicily, alleges that it was instigated by British agents, as England is anxious that the Sicilians should declare themselves for the protection of the British government. It is thought on the other hand that the people of Sicily, although ripe for rebellion, need no foreign aid to incite them to terrible deeds.

The President—Oh, no, that would not do. Mr. Hopper, of Mississippi, opposed the proposition of Mr. Barry. We are no longer delegates to the other Convention. him (Yancey) with singing pseans to the Union.

Mr. Jackson, of Georgia—I certainly never intimated that the gentleman from Georgia sung pseans to the Union, certainly no one will ever charge him with such an offense. My remarks were directed raiher to my colleague, who I thought was placing Georgia in a wrong position. He did not wish to be placed in a position of singing of pseans to the Union.

Mr. Yancey would not misrepresent Georgia, but he did not wish any movement to go forth to the country either as a movement to preserve or destroy the Union, but rather to preserve or destroy the Union, but rather to preserve in the constitutional rights of the South, detailing the position of the Southern States in retiring from the Convention, and their subsequent action. We have adopted the majority platform, which that Convention rejected, and we propose to preserve it as a head-stone for the builders, upon which the Democracy of the Union can rely. We, therefore, consider it essential that an address should be prepared, containing all these facts, in the simplest and briefest form, before the country, in a true, constitutional and national position. The question was demanded.

and national position. The question was demanded.

The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of one from each State represented be appointed to prepare an address to the people of the United States, explanatory of the reasons which have actuated this Convention in adopting the course it has pursued, in vindication of its principles for action.

Gen. Simmons, of South Carolina, was unwilling to allow any Committee to put forth an address representing him which he would have no opportunity of previously examining. He was no politician, but he had his own views. He did not like some features of the platform, especially those relating to the Pacific Railroad, and that which declares duty to the Union as superior to the Southern States. He thought there was no necessity for an address, nor would he follow the Convention to Baltimore. When he came BEURED BY RECENT LETTERS PATENT.

till 8 P. M. The delegates were requested to remain for private consultation on the propositions before the Convention.

The Convention resumed at 8 P. M. Mr. Bayard immediately left the Chair and addressed the Convention. He reviewed the position of the seceders; he approved of the platform, but it was not in language that he would prefer. In regard to the resolution for preparing an address and reassembling at Washington one week anterior to the reassembling of the Convention at Baltimore, he could not approve of. He was unwilling to assent to the proposition of an address by a committee, which was to go forth to the country before he could have an opportunity of examining it. He could not trust anything or set of men, however able or patriotic they might be to speak to the public for him. He, therefore, should oppose the Union. He continued to speak nearly an hour, defining his position, reviewing the course of the National Convention, and said that the Southern non-Democratic States. He desired the unity of the Democratic Party, and was prepared to support their nominee if he should really prove a National man. His personal efforts were for Senator Hunter. He styled the New York Soft Delegation as a band of political gamblers, and concluded by saying that he could not retain a seat in this Convention, if that resolution was adopted. He could approve of it as a delegate from twelve of the Cotton States. He, therefore, asked permission of the Convention to decline the position which they had placed him and to retire.

He spoke for two hours very eloquently against disunion, and, an finishing, took his hat and retired from the Convention.

Robt. Clark was then chosen President.

Judge Meek called up the resolution, but as Mississippi and Texas objected to an address, it was withdrawn.

Mr. Jackson, of Ga., then offered his resolution for a Southern Convention to be held on the second Monday in June, which was adopted with but five or six dissenting persons. Fifth-street.
